As an RYA recognised training school, 'Sail Training For You', offers a complete range of practical courses for sail cruising, from basic introduction to yachting to the advanced Yachtmaster preparation course. We are fortunate to have Bill Hagen as our Chief Instructor. He has many years sailing and training experience and is responsible for the overall standards of our training yachts and instructors.

We have taken care to ensure that our yachts are well prepared for sail training and, as the courses are all residential, the boats are equipped for your comfort while living aboard, with central heating, shower, fridge, radio/CD player etc. All our training yachts are equipped and maintained to the highest standards. We pride ourselves that our yachts are amongst the best available for sail training and our customers testimonials indicate their appreciation.

Having excellent yachts available for sail training is not in itself enough for an enjoyable few days' instruction aboard! We recognise that the instructor obviously plays a pivotal role and we have been very careful in our choice of instructors to ensure that learning will also be great fun. We operate within the tidal waters of the Firth of Clyde which is a beautiful sailing area with fine, sheltered anchorages and many picturesque natural harbours, all within easy reach of major transport links.

Our course cost includes rental of waterproof clothing, all fuel/gas costs, meals on board and berthing costs (see website for specific details). The price of a 5-day course running from Kip Marina for 2008 is £420 per person and includes all those hidden extras which many companies add on later. More importantly, the price also reflects the low student to tutor ratio (a maximum of 4 students to one tutor) which significantly increases each student's time with the instructor.
